JAPS AT GATES OF MANILA

ALLIES GREET NEW YEAR, SEE VICTORY SURE

Americans, Newcomers To War, Are Gayest of World's Holiday Celebrants.

LONDON BLACKED OUT

Russians Festive; Tokyo Uses Drinks To Mark Fall of Crown Colony.

(By Associated Press)

Peoples of the Allied, anti-Axis powers saw the New Year in today with varying degrees of merriment but with the single confidence that it would bring them closer to the ultimate victory over the great military dictatorships.

Americans of the United States mainland, newest comers to the battle lines, were the gayest.

In New York thousands jammed Times Square for the traditional horn-tooting, whistle-blowing welcome.

Far out in the Pacific, however, other Americans saw in the date change the dread approach of conquest by an alien race. Failure of any but official messages to come through from Manila prevented the distressed Philippine capital from telling its New Year eve story.

Canadian cities, whose sons have long been in the thick of overseas fighting, celebrated in less boisterous manner than usual. The din of automobile horns provided the chief sound effects as factory sirens which once screamed their salute to the New Year were silent upon government orders.

Londoners gave 1942 a warm but modest welcome. Relatively few merrymakers braved the unrelenting blackout but many celebrated quietly indoors. Behind darkened doors of hotels and restaurants almost unprecedented crowds ate, drank and danced. Simple souvenir programs reflected the paper shortage but most parties managed to scrape together paper hats.

A crowd of some 3,000 persons, mostly service men and their girls gathered in Piccadilly Circus to dance in the darkness and sing "Auld Lang Syne" as the year ended.

Another group of 300 did a snake dance outside St. Paul's cathedral, singing "Land of Hope and Glory" as clocks struck 12. Men and women in uniform were

RECEIPTS GAIN

Personal Tax Collection Ends With $184,349 Paid.

Richland county's last-half personal tax collection which closed yesterday brought more tax money into the county treasury than was due for the final half of the year. County Treasurer Charles C. Payne's figures showed. The books closed last ngiht.

Collections to yesterday morning totaled $184,349, or about $12,000 more than the tax charge for the period. Yesterday's receipts which were not figured in the total were expected to boost that amount to nearly $190,000.

Receipts for Monday and Tuesday amounted to nearly $50,000 and helped to bring the total well over 100 per cent of the amount due. The excess collections represented payments of delinquent levies.

The figures showed that collections included $159,810 in general personal taxes and $24,539 in classified levies.

SWELL FORCES

Japs Send Reinforcements to Changsha Area.

CHUNGKING, China—(AP)—Reinforcements were reported today to have swelled Japanese forces south of the Milo river to 50,000 for the drive on Changsha, but Chinese said they had been stopped by the stonewall resistance of China's armies.

The invaders suffered heavy losses, it was said. Nevertheless Chinese suggested that the situation of Changsha, capital of Hunan province and a silk producing center, was grave.

CITY WHOOPS IN NEW YEAR

Patriotism Shines Through Noisy Greeting as Gatherings Sing National Anthem.

Mansfielders awakened this morning—some with headaches—to face a new year fraught with the job of helping America win World war No. 2, after participating in an "all-out" New Year eve celebration that may be the last of its kind until the battle is won.

The city whooped it up in night clubs, theaters, hotels and private homes but no matter where the celebration was held the singing of the national anthem was heard at midnight. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was given precedence in this year of war over the traditional "Auld Lang Syne," in response to a city-wide appeal made by Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, civilian defense chairman, that the anthem be sung with "our boys in the Philippines in mind."

Watchnight services in city churches were also highlighted by the singing of the national anthem as hundreds gathered to observe the passing of the old year with a season of prayer.

Night clubs and dine and dance spots both in and near Mansfield were crowded with merry-makers despite increased cover charges. All five local theaters drew midnight crowds with New Year eve bills that included a stage revue at the Madison. Special floor shows were also presented by several night clubs.

War Closes His $35,000 Rubber Block Business

CLEVELAND, —(AP)— Because rubber alphabet blocks for children aren't essential to defense, a one-time railroad bookkeeper who built a $35-000-a-year business from the toys is going to shut down until the war is over.

But that's all right, said 7?-year-old Frank Lengs. "I didn't expect to work forever, anyway."

Lengs started the business in 1929, convinced he could make safe alphabet blocks from sponge rubber. At first it was a spare time job in a little barber shop's backroom. But business grew so rapidly that he quite his job with the New York Central railroad and devoted full time to toy making.

The OPM opined recently that the blocks were not essential to the war program, so Lengs closed up—with $3,000 in orders unfilled.

Baby Arrives at Hospital 3 Minutes After 1942's Debut

Unless some other baby was born within the first two minutes of 1942, Mansfield's first baby of the new year and winner of the 1942 baby derby is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Barns, 54½ Sturges avenue, who was born at General hospital today at 12:03 a. m.

The baby, if verified as the city's first, will be the winner of an array of gifts from Mansfield merchants. The health department birth records will determine whether or not the Barns baby is declared the winner.

The baby girl, who weighed seven pounds, ten ounces, is the Barns' first child. Barns works for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company and was recently transferred from Mansfield to Pittsburgh.

Hospital officials telephoned Barns at Pittsburgh to inform him of the birth of his daughter.

The baby derby has been restricted to children born within the corporate limits of Mansfield. The Barns baby will probably be the winner unless a birth reported at home is filed with the health department by a Mansfield physician.

NAMES WILEY TO PARK BOARD

Mayor Reveals Appointments as New City Officials Take Office Today.

With new city officials scheduled to take office today, Mayor William J. Locke announced one new appointment and the re-appointment of four others to posts within the city's various departments.

The mayor said that he appointed Edward Wiley, president of the Mansfield Park association to succeed Roy W. Vaughn, resigned, to start his term as councilman-at-large.

Locke said that he has not yet decided upon the appointment of a new civil service commissioner to succeed F. F. Huber, whose term expired yesterday.

Other party leaders said that Frank Mitsch, jr., Fifth ward resident, was being considered for the position and stated that this would be in the form of a "reward" for Democratic votes given the Republicans in the Fifth ward in November. Mitsch refused to comment.

Reappointments announced by Mayor Locke included James (Jesse) Willard as a member of the boxing commission, J. H. Gongwer as a member of the board of health, Carl H. Stander as a member of the housing board and H. G. Brunner as a member of the park commission.

The mayor stated that the appointment of the heads of the various departments, such as

COUNTY GIVEN 61 TIRES FOR FIRST RATION

That's All There'll Be For January Under Schedule Set Up By OPA.

TRUCKS TO GET 119

Mansfield Rationing Board To Direct Distribution of Allotments.

Richland county today had been allotted 61 tires for its 15,000 passenger cars, light trucks and motorcycles as the county's January sales quota under the wartime tire rationing program. Fifty one tubes were allotted for the same month.

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington where the office of price administration set the quotas, said that 119 heavy truck and bus tires were also allotted the county for January. Only 99 tubes were allotted in the truck-bus class.

Rationing of the allotment will be directed here by the newly created tire-rationing board of which James Bailey is president.

Quotas set for nearby counties include: Crawford—30 tires, 25 tubes for passenger cars, 65 tires, 54 tubes for trucks; Ashland—27 tires, 23 tubes for passenger cars, 61 tires and 51 tubes for trucks; Holmes—nine tires and eight tubes for passenger cars, 28 tires, 23 tubes for trucks.

The office of price administration announced that Ohio had been allotted 5,053 passenger automobile tires and 4,229 tubes.

The quota for trucks and buses during the month was set at 11,925 tires and 9,969 tubes.

The rationing permitted sale throughout the United States and its territories of about 357,000 tires, compared with a normal month's consumption throughout the nation of about 4,000,000.

Cuyahoga county received the greatests allotment in the state—919 automobile and 1,750 truck and bus tires—while the smallest was rationed out to Vinton county, five automobile and 16 truck and bus.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said he hoped future quotas could be increased but explained that any change would depend on the military situation and future demands of the Allied armed forces.

Maximum sales of 114,191 tires for passenger cars, motorcycles and light trucks and 242,783 for heavier trucks and buses are permitted under the January quotas.

Stevens was arrested yesterday afternoon by Marshal William Walker of Bellville as the youth was attempting to hitchhike a ride near the village. He was brought to the county jail and officers at Fort Hayes were notified.

The army report showed that Stevens was inducted into service Nov. 19 and deserted two days later. County authorities said he was married a short time before he reported at Fort Hayes for military service.

Nippon Capture Of Philippine Capital Waited

Japanese Forces Battle British Only 190 Miles From Singapore, Claim Capture of Strategic Post Of Kuantan In Malaya.

(Compiled From Latest Cables.)

Japan's bullet-ripped legions smashed with full force at the gates of Manila today, according to last reports, and all indications were that its capture was imminent as other Nipponese troops clashed with British forces only 190 miles north of Singapore.

But while Nippon strained the sinews of its covetous claw in an all-out effort to snatch America's far eastern capitol, Washington military experts contended that seizure of Manila would not pre-suppose the fall of the Philippines.

Tacticians said there probably would be at least three moves Gen. MacArthur may make on the bloody checkerboard of Luzon island even after the capture of Manila. Any of these operations possibly can further avert a Japanese triumph in the first major battle of the war.

Observers were quick to point out, however, that the combined American-Filipino forces, although outnumbered in men and machinery, may yet stage a last ditch stand that will thwart Japan's north-south pincer movement toward the city.

Official Washington seemingly had prepared itself, however, for the news of Nippon's entry into the once-placid Philippines key city.

Reaction was based chiefly on the war department's meager communiques. Manila was not mentioned directly in either of two issued yesterday and indications throughout the night were that its communications with the outside world had been severed.

MacArthur advised the war department from his field headquarters that American and Filipino troops had readjusted their lines and were extracting a heavy toll of lives from the enemy as it increased pressure on all fronts.

This was interpreted to mean that the defense units had fallen back both in the north and south, but there was no confirmation of Tokyo reports that the invaders had advanced to within four miles of Manila.

The far eastern commander later disclosed he had evacuated wounded soldiers from "the Manila area," and sent them to Australia aboard the hospital ship, Mactan.

CONFIDENT: British Note Cut In Sea Losses as Year Starts

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—A sharp cut in shipping losses from German sea and air attacks and indications that the Axis will feel in 1942 the weight of bomb assaults overshadowing the destructive air offensives of 1941 gave Britons new confidence today.

To begin the new year, the ministry of information reported that the German submarine fleet has been hard hit and that the German high command "is faced with difficulties in manning U-boats and adequate training of their crews."

Figures were not given but the ministry said Britain's shipping losses from air attacks had been cut in recent months to only eight per cent of those early in the year.

The ministry added that merchant shipping losses early in 1941 were on a scale causing anxiety but that "in the last few months they have been reduced to an extent which enables the future to be regarded with confidence provided our measures for the protection of sea-borne trade continue to increase in power and effectiveness as they have done during the last 12 months."

The air ministry in its summary announced that the way now was open for a great bombing assault on Axis territory during 1942.

The RAF, it said, has "established air supremacy deep into occupied territory."

Looking back over last year, the ministry said British bombers had disorganized shipping along occupied territory coasts, especially Nazi supply lines to Russia, carried out nearly 200 attacks on

OMEN: Russians Begin Year By Routing Nazi Army Corps

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—Soviet Russia started her new war year today with announcement of the recapture of Kaluga, smashing of Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian's German tank command and routing of six army corps, made up of perhaps 250,000 men, in battle below Moscow.

Red army troops also mopped up the second SS (Elite Guard) brigade, which had been flown 750 miles from the Polish city of Krakow to the undulating plains of the Oka river valley in a vain attempt to check the counter-offensive, the Soviet information bureau said.

Covering days of bloody action over miles of snow-blanketed terrain, the announcement followed by 24 hours reports of further gains in the Leningrad sector and a counter-invasion in force against Axis positions on the Panhandle of the Crimea.

To the Soviet people it constituted an auspicious opening for 1942, which the Moscow radio declared "must and will" bring victory to Russia, Britain and the United States.

Kaluga, a key railway center 110 miles southwest of the capital, was reoccupied finally Tuesday, the information bureau said, after clearing of the invaders from ten towns and hundreds of villages in a campaign originally launched from Tula, 60 miles to the east.

Possession of the rail junction of Novy Kirishi also was claimed.

Wounded men as well as arms were being abandoned by the

LIBRARY GETS NEW BOOKS ON PLANES, STEEL

Demand For Information on Technical Subjects Causes Increase In This List.

Because of the growing demand for technical books on all subjects related to the national defense program the Mansfield Public Library is adding an unusually large number of these books to its present collection.

The new titles available this week concern the mechanics of aircraft and also deal with steel construction and metallurgy. Other titles will also be posted as the books are received.

New subjects in fiction include "A Woman Is Witness," a novel in diary form by Ernst Lothar, which begins in Paris in April, 1938, and ends there in August, 1940. Translated by Barrows Mussey the book describes the fate of a 24-year-old Viennese girl from the time of the Sudeten crisis until after the German occupation of Paris.

DESTINY HAS EIGHT EYES by Willard A. Hanna is the story of an unfinished bridge, of the people who were striving to complete it, of the brooding prospect of war. The scene is a Chinese university town, the characters a young American, a White Russian engineer, a Chinese intellectual, a Jewish refugee — the bridge, the focal point of the situation, its fate somehow holding the fate of all. How each faced the tragedy of the Japanese occupation, and at the same time resolved his personal problem, makes a narrative filled with power and suspense.

SHADOW OF WINGS by Stella Morgan is a story of the Manners family who are absurd, lovable, and funny. Caro, who long ago had decided that life at the Old House Barn with a husband and five children was more important than the violin, and John, whose mystery thrillers barely kept them going, were the mainstays. But there were others, and their stories are told with charm and delightful humor in this book which vividly reveals the staunch spirit that imbues an England living under the "shadow of wings."

OTHER FICTION: EVIL UNDER THE SUN by Christie, COUNTY SEAT by Corey, A CURTAIN OF GREEN edited by Walty.

From an English vantage point Raymond Daniell, in his book, CIVILIANS MUST FIGHT, traces the progress of the war as it affected Britain on land, in the air and at sea. The hundreds of significant stories buried in every action make this book a sharp, dramatic picture of an Island Kingdom defending itself—as well as a study of what has kept England in motion in spite of shocking reverses.

The pattern Eric Linklater has used for his autobiography, THE MAN ON MY BACK, is a journey starting with his boyhood in the Orkney Islands, and returning there after a wandering passage through the First World War, through India and America, and trial and error. The author of many novels, Mr. Linklater has had a most varied life, and his autobiography is full of lively and charming stories, effectively told. IDEAS FOR THE ICE AGE by Max Lerner is composed of a number of essays, for the most part written over a period of two years and ranging widely across the world and the concerns of the day.

OTHER NON-FICTION: THE BIBLE FOR TODAY ed. by Stirling; GLASS, THE MIRACLE MAKER by Phillips; STREAMLINE YOUR DANCING by Ware; THE COKESBURY SHOWER BOOK; MANUAL OF SPANISH COMMERCIAL CORRESPONDENCE by MacDonald; SPANISH-ENGLAND AND ENGLISH-SPANISH COMMERCIAL DICTIONARY by MacDonald; PORTUGUESE-ENGLISH AND ENGLISH-PORTUGUESE COMMERCIAL DICTIONARY by Smith; ESSENTIALS OF ACCOUNTING by Paton; EASY-TO-MAKE SLIP COVERS by Bast; SECURITY HOMES ed. by American Builder and Building Age.

TECHNICAL SUBJECTS: AVIATION: PRELIMINARY AIRPLANE DESIGN by Wilson; MACHINE TOOLS IN AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION by Nolan; AIRCRAFT PROPELLER by Markey; ELEMENTARY AERODYNAMICS by Hume; PRACTICAL MATHEMATICS OF AVIATION by Downer; AIRCRAFT TORCH WELDING by Borcher; AIRCRAFT INSPECTION METHODS by Bartholomew; FLYING FLEETS by Johnston; FLIGHT WITHOUT POWER by Barringer; HOW TO BE AN AVIATOR by Merrill and Daws; AIRCRAFT RADIO AND ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT by Morgan; AIRPLANE DESIGN MANUAL by Teichmann; AERONAUTICAL METEOROLOGY by Taylor.

OTHER TECHNICAL BOOKS: MOTION STUDY by Sampter; WELDED STEEL CONSTRUCTION by Hale; MODERN METALLURGY FOR ENGINEERS by Sisco; TROUBLES OF ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT by Stafford; PUMPS by Kristal and Annett; ILLUMINATION ENGINEERING by Schilling.

Pledge of Allegiance to Flag

"I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Year of Preparation for Victory

OUT of the perplexity and uncertainty that marks the beginning of 1942 there emerges at least one clear-cut picture—the unalterable determination of the American people to make this a year in which the Allied forces will move far toward final victory over the Axis powers . . . if, indeed, that cannot be accomplished during the present year.

This year will bring many changes from the free flow of comforts, conveniences and luxuries to which a vast majority of Americans have long been accustomed, and there will be rationing of many commodities which have come to be regarded as essentials . . . but there is no likelihood of shortages in such actual necessities as food, clothing and fuel anywhere in the United States—unless there should be an entirely improbable enemy invasion at some point.

For the country as a whole the year's program is beginning to take form, lacking only a further call upon men most competent to perform tasks of direction under war conditions.

States, counties, cities, villages, rural communities and individuals will each have responsibilities to assume and duties to perform, and—for a time—all other considerations will be secondary to the one big job of winning the war.

Mansfield, as a unit in the national set-up of production for defense and economic adjustment to wartime conditions, will be called upon to play a creditable part in the drama of war, and again, as in 1917, it needs only direction and leadership to assure whole-hearted co-operation of every loyal citizen in whatever work needs be done or sacrifices made.

As was the case in the far-away days of the Civil war, the later Spanish-American war, and the better remembered first World war, there has again been a patriotic response from Mansfield and Richland county in contributing to various branches of military service, and it is in recognition and appreciation of these greater sacrifices that those who remain in civilian capacities will give without stint of their time, labor and money to the home tasks vitally essential in supporting the nation's fighting forces

Heavy responsibility rests upon everyone—those upon farms as well as residents of cities and towns—to share to the extent of mental ability, physical strength and financial resources, in the tremendous task that lies ahead . . . the winning of a war which, if lost, would doom human freedom throughout the world and enslave Americans in all the horrors of a totalitarian system such as has already been visited upon the ravaged nations of continental Europe by crazed and barbaric Hitler and his fear-scourged hordes.

In Mansfield, while prospects for the new year cannot seem bright, there are many elements which encourage a feeling of optimism that employment, earnings, sufficient commodities to supply reasonable demands, and the general course of business, social and community life can be made to run along fairly normal lines—always keeping in mind that first thought must be for adequate supply of war needs. If these are not met little else will matter by the end of the year that is now starting.

'Good Neighbors' Notice Discourtesy

DOROTHY THOMPSON has insisted several times that the United States is not fighting hard enough on the psychological front, that it is not using enough of the right kind of propaganda to beat the false but effective Axis output. Partial confirmation of this charge is found in the Chicago News in a dispatch sent from Chile by its correspondent, Allen Haden. The newspaper man quotes a Chilean politician to this effect:

Chileans remain suspicious of the United States in many matters because of the "roughness" of our diplomacy and the fact that our ambassadors usually cannot speak Spanish. They do not like our rigid consular regulations or the hard-boiled attitude of our business men, and so on.

"Furthermore," he said, "you have no propaganda to set forth your side. Perhaps in a few more decades you'll learn to smooth your diplomacy and business methods and develop your propaganda as have the British and Germans."

This criticism is along lines that may well be taken to heart, as it reveals an attitude which makes some people obnoxious at home as well as abroad. Courtesy and good manners require understanding of other people's rights and personality, and adjustment to natural differences in Latin American countries is essential to friendly trade relations and hemispheric solidarity.

Check Up On Your Flashlight

A SIMPLE precaution, even in advance of possible blackouts, is to make sure that there is one or more flashlights in every home, and that these are equipped with active batteries.

Experimental blackouts are not unlikely in many cities and experience elsewhere has demonstrated the advantage of having a flashlight handy for emergency need, just as careful motorists are accustomed to carrying a flashlight in the car for use in case of accident or mechanical trouble.

Because of the increased demand for flashlights, bulbs and batteries in coastal areas threatened with air raids, the Office of Price Administration has entered an order that ceiling prices on these items be established at the level of December 9.

Better check up on your flashlight and make sure that batteries and bulb are in working order.

Agriculture's Broad Vision

AGRICULTURE, if properly organized, can be a balance wheel between capital and labor, says Louis J. Taber, a middle-western farm expert. That is because the farmer is at the same time a capitalist, an employer and a manual worker. He urges that, in working out its destiny, agriculture must avoid the mistakes of arrogance made alike by big business and big labor.

This attitude suggests a practical service that agriculture might be able to perform for the other two groups. Capital and labor don't think of calling in the farmer as an arbiter when they get into an industrial or ideological jam. Yet they might do worse.

JUST WAIT UNTIL HE GROWS UP!

Duties of Price as Chief Censor

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

BY TITLE he's the government's censor. Really Byron Price is more a managing editor of the news report that Uncle Sam broadcasts.

Byron Price

Censorship may be necessary in wartime, but so's the right kind of publicity. When the enemy's practicing it, it is known as propaganda. It is publicity, though, when we engage in it ourselves.

Uncle Samuel already had press agents galore before Byron's conscription from the Associated Press' news managership, a few days ago, to superintend governmental editing. Every Washington department has at least one publicity man of its own, and so do most emergency and other bureaus. Some have whole staffs of them. It's a fact, however, that they needed a single chief, to co-ordinate their activities, and also to regulate them.

That's Byron Price's new job.

A managing editor's business is to see that his report is well, interestingly and comprehensively prepared—that all the news is told that ought to be told. There is stuff, though, that isn't fit to print or otherwise disseminate, or maybe there are policy reasons for hush-hushing it. When a piece of that kind of copy lands on his desk, the m. e.'s function is to blue pencil it. To that extent he is properly a censor.

Tough to Dig Out.

The truth is that we've had a fairly strict censorship, at the source, for some time. That is, while diggers after news haven't been forbidden to publish whatever dope they succeeded in disinterring, there's been plenty of it that they haven't been able to get at. And quit a bit of this suppressed information has been of a sort that it would have paid Uncle Sammy to have circulated.

Very recently the navy department established a sure-enough censorship over the cabling or radioing of messages abroad.

It's easy to understand why countries with which we're at war shouldn't be tipped off to items that might help them in fighting us and the democracies we are associated with. The trouble with a naval and army officer as a censor, though, is that he isn't apt to have a lick of news judgment. No doubt he can spot what's calculated to be useful to the Axis folk, but his tendency, in an honest effort to be thorough, is to kill matter that would be first-class advertising for us.

The consorial assignment, in short, logically is one for an able, experienced professional journalist, who'll do all the better if he's had, on the side, some military experience.

Byron Price fills the bill admirably.

He's put in 30 years as a reporter and editor on newspapers and news associations, with the exception of a break during World war No. 1, when he was a captain of infantry. He's personally acquainted with every newspaper old-timer in the country. I had my own initial contacts with him in about 1912, when we were, simultaneously, United Press bureau managers.

He's had a long career in Washington, our national news center, especially with the present conflict raging. He's very popular in news gathering circles. The boys won't resent being censored by him when he considers it necessary.

Calling a censorship a news disseminating bureau, like George Creel's committee of public information, in the last war, takes some of the curse off it.

George knew how to be constructive with his news, as well as secretive.

The Warrior

—By HELEN LOOMIS LINHAM

The New Year child is wearing
A helmet of shining steel.
And over his shoulder is carrying
A gun that is very real.

He does not come running and dancing;
But the sober, patient - with a will!
He marches straight, not once glancing;
All his movements are sharpened by skill.

He is clean and quick and clever;
Acquainted with gas and alarms;
Familiar with bombs and the ever
Destruction of ships and arms.

The New Year child is a Warrior!
Alert on the land and the sea;
He is king of the air, and a lawyer
In tricking an enemy

He is strong as a north wind sweeping
Across a barren track;
Though war means death, there's no weeping,
And never a turning back!

Listen World!

I'll Have Faith!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

RESOLUTIONS. NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS. Are you for or agin 'em? And how long can you keep them, if ever?

Me, I've just about given up. Not that I can't make Resolutions. Noble, sublime ones. So touching I have to take time out for tears while I'm writing them down. But the morning dew has nothing on them when it comes to dissolving. Here they are . . . and there they A-I-N'-T. So why've I wasted all that lovely breath?

Felt the same? Of course you have. That's why I'm writing this. For I've a hunch that, under our wise-cracking grins, we're both feeling plenty low about 1942.

"Aw, what's the use?" we mumble to ourselves. "Whatsa use of making fine plans when the whole world's gone wacky? Who cares whether we're good or bad? What difference does it make? Why kid ourselves that goodness pays when it's plain that the bums and bullies get the breaks? Those cut-throats across the water have the right idea—get while the gettin's good and to heck with the other fellow! That's the only kind of resolution that pays in this man's world."

Well, I admit there are points to your argument, stranger. And plenty of decent but discouraged citizens will applaud it. I'd have done so myself, once. But this year I'm not going to vote your ticket. I can't. It would be like reaching for another axe when you saw your own mother being butchered. Seems to me, America's having a tough enough time without you and I going yellow, too . . . two-timing all she's meant to us, done for us. And so, though I'm the world's record resolution buster, I'm going to take a chance and make one more.

I'M GOING TO HAVE FAITH!

I admit the prospect isn't very appealing. The Wicked certainly seem to be pushing the Righteous plumb off the map. But mightn't that be because the Wicked have more faith in themselves and their works than the Righteous have? If so, their system certainly seems to work. And if it works for them, why shouldn't it work for us? Anyway, I'm going to give it a try.

I'M GOING TO HAVE FAITH THIS YEAR! I'M GOING TO BELIEVE IN MY COUNTRY, MY NEIGHBORS AND MYSELF. . . . AND THE FINE THINGS WE'VE DONE AND ARE TRYING TO DO. I'M GOING TO BELIEVE THAT DECENCY AND DEMOCRACY DO PAY . . . AND THAT EVEN IF WE HAVE MADE A BATCH OF BLUNDERS IN THE PAST, NOTHING CAN STAND AGAINST US, ONCE WE GET GOING.

I'm going to believe this . . . and I'm going to try to show that belief in every word I speak, every move I make. Sure, I'll have many a moment of secret doubt and despair. But when they come, I'll try to remember the words of that frantic father who brought his stricken son to Christ, pleading for healing.

"Jesus said unto him, 'If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth . . . And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, 'Lord, I believe: help thou mine unbelief.'"

I SHALL HAVE FAITH THIS YEAR. AND IF MY FAITH SHOULD SOMETIMES FALTER, GOD, "HELP THOU MINE UNBELIEF." THIS IS MY NEW YEAR'S PRAYER.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Draft Registration Starts Soon, Will Take Weeks to Complete

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Senator Burt Wheeler doesn't know it, but he was paid a high tribute by Winston Churchill.

After his speech at the joint session of congress, the British prime minister shook hands with congressmen as they filed past him. To Senators Clark, Nye and LaFollette, Churchill was courteous but made no special comment.

But when Wheeler was presented, Churchill stopped him, shook his hand warmly and said, "This is a genuine pleasure to me, sir. I've long wanted to meet you. This is one of the pleasantest moments of this very happy occasion."

Smiling broadly, Wheeler thanked Churchill cordially and moved on. Later during the congressional luncheon at which Wheeler was not present, the prime minister again referred to his delight in meeting the Montana senator.

"I liked him," Churchill said. "He is a fighting man. I have been in 14 political fights, won eight and lost six. Once I was beaten three times in 18 months. I respect and admire fighting men even if they are against me.

"In these troubled times we should welcome good fighters, regardless of the differences of the past. After the war broke out some of my friends wanted to go after Chamberlain and his group, who had tried to appease the Nazis. They called them Munich-eners. I had opposed this group as violently as anyone in Britain, but I was against any reprisals. I told my friends that the Chamberlain group had tried to do their duty in the best light they saw it and that now there was a job to be done fighting the Nazis, not one another.

"I told them that when the present fights with the past, the future is hopeless."

Churchillania.

CHURCHILL ate heartily of turkey, stuffing, cranberry sauce and mashed potatoes at his luncheon with congressional leaders, remarked on the excellence of the cheese served with the apple pie for dessert. It was a snappy cheese, made in Wisconsin. . . . While receiving the congratulations of senators and representatives following his speech, Churchill suddenly inquired, "Where's Senator Carter Glass?" Told that the 83-year-old Virginian had been unavoidably detained, Churchill said, "Oh, I'm sorry. I hoped very much to have the pleasure of meeting him." . . . Most nervous man in the senate during Churchill's speech was Lord Halifax, British ambassador, who seemed worried about his chief. . . . Calmest man was Russian Ambassador Litvinoff, who sat in the same row with Halifax, three seats away. . . . Litvinoff came out of his shell and applauded vigorously when Churchill spoke of the valiant fight of the Chinese against the Japanese. He also grinned broadly when the prime minister ridiculed Mussolini.

Churchill's Routine.

DURING his Washington visit Winston Churchill, aged 67, amazed the American public by his vitality. But still more he amazed White House aides who watched the odd routine of his personal life.

"Winnie" Churchill did not heed the Ben Franklin maxim about early to bed and early to rise. His day did not begin until ten in the morning. At that hour he wakened and plunged into the task of reading the papers, dictating memos, and seeing intimate advisers.

At one o'clock he ate a tremendous lunch—with champagne. After lunch came a siesta, until four o'clock. After that, he worked furiously until eight. Into that four-hour period he packed more than most people can accomplish in a full eight-hour day.

But "Winnie's" day had just begun. He drank a highball with dinner, and was ready for a long evening of conferences and reading and writing, working through most of the night. His associates fell away by midnight, and for the rest of the time, Churchill enjoyed the deep concentration that comes from working when the rest of the town is asleep.

His "day" ended at four in the morning, when he retired, to sleep until ten.

New Draft Registration.

THE new 18 to 64 draft registration has been tentatively set to start in January. Unlike the original registration, it will not be done in a day.

Because of the tremendous job of handling 24,000,000 men who come under the new law, registration will be extended over a period of weeks and will be by age groups. The 36 to 44 group, subject to military service, will come first.

After them will come those 18 to 21—then those past 44. The latter will be divided into two ten-year groups. Details are now being worked out.

In the first draft, with the aid of 1,000,000 volunteer workers, 17,500,000 men were registered on one day, October 16, 1940. To avoid swamping the 6,500 local draft boards, Selective Service chiefs have now decided to adopt a split-up "R Day" system, extending over a period of weeks.

When the registration has been completed, Selective Service files will contain the names of 42,000,000 men available for military duty.

OPM Efficiency.

OPM chiefs are very proud of their latest internal reorganization centralizing control directly in the hands of Directors Knudsen and Hillman.

It is contended that this will eliminate much redtape and speed up administrative processes. However, newsmen have had difficulty fathoming the intricacies of the new set-up and one reporter asked an OPM big-shot to explain its operation.

"Well, under the new system," said the official, "all industrial branch chiefs report direct to Knudsen-Hillman instead of to their division chiefs as was previously done."

"What happens if Knudsen-Hillman can't decide what should be done?"

"They call in the division chief."

"Oh," said the reporter, by this time more confused than ever "Instead of the branch chief consulting his division chief before seeing Knudsen-Hillman, he now sees them first and they call in the division chief."

"That's right. See the amount of time saved?"

"No, I don't," said the newsman. "And neither do you."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It will be only a few days before boxing writers gather for a dinner at the Ruppert Brewery to present Joe Louis with the Edward J. Neil memorial plaque.

Each year this plaque is given to the fighter who, in the opinion of the boxing writers has contributed the most during the year to the game. Last year Henry Armstrong won it. The year before it was Billy Conn, and the year before that Jack Dempsey.

It seems a good time to talk about Eddie Neil because Eddie was one of the first of America's casualties in this world wide war. It is true that war hadn't been declared when a young artillerist in Spain got the range of a car in which Neil and two other correspondents were riding, back in 1938, but the guns were booming, and they killed men just as dead. They killed Eddie, and they killed Richard Sheepshanks and Brandish Johnson with him.

EDDIE NEIL was a correspondent who followed the fortunes of war in Ethiopia and later in Spain. But before that he was a sports writer who became an intimate of the kings of sport, who was cited in the 1932 Pulitzer awards, who wore a thatch of prematurely gray hair and a grin that lit up his countenance like a Kleig light.

He used to live in a fantastic apartment on top of a hotel on the West Side with Mark Barron, who was also a correspondent during the Ethiopian war and who has written drama criticisms for the AP for almost a decade.

This apartment was furnished largely with props that were taken from Broadway plays. There was the ancient old box phonograph Jeanne Eagles had used for her needleworn records in "Rain." There was a sofa that came out of "The Bat," and a painting that adorned the walls of "The Royal Family." You saw cash registers, spittoons, hall trees and other relics that had contributed to the cheers of many a successful first night on Broadway.

I USED to bunk in there at times, and amid this debris there were always several items that stood out as the personal objects of Eddie Neil's affection. One was a photograph of his kid, whom he referred to as "Powerhouse." Another was a book by the late Don Skene, sports-writing colleague who had "shoeboxed" his way from the West Coast to Chicago and thence to Manhattan. "I didn't have enough money to ride first class," Don explained. "So I rode the coaches. Whenever I'd see a man or a party with a shoebox I'd know that was lunch, so I'd introduce myself and sit down and stay until they had to bring out the box. There wasn't any way they could keep from inviting me to share their lunches, and I accepted. That's what you call shoe-boxing your way across the country."

I think of these things because of many reasons....Because once again the Eddie Neil plaque is coming up . . . Because Jack Dempsey and Pepper Martin and Sonja Henie have not forgotten. . . . Because it is war, and because it was just three years ago today that Edward J. Neil, with a characteristic grin, climbed into a truck and rode out to meet the tag-line of his career.

A Farmer's Diary

A Country Editor

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

HE INTRODUCED himself as the editor of a small rural weekly paper—and as soon as I heard him speak, I said, "You're Pennsylvania Dutch, aren't you? Your accent reminds me of someone who lived in our old neighborhood years ago."

"My father came from Germany and my mother from Switzerland, and 'twas low Dutch they spoke," he admitted, then. "English was a hard language to learn at school, when the whole neighborhood spoke Dutch at home. They never did learn it right. We children fared better, being born Americans.

"I've done a number of different kinds of work, in my time. I farmed, and stood on market with butter and eggs."

"You are a scholarly appearing man," I put in.

"I used to wear a white shirt to market, and put the butter on cracked ice. It sold faster," he admitted, grinning. "I taught school fourteen years — country school. When that job ended, I became an editor."

"You should be successful."

Well—I like it. Most editors aren't appreciated, though. A neighboring village wanted me to start a paper there, and I told them they wouldn't like me any better, if I did . . . than the man they have. They have a good paper, and they don't know it. A lot of things enter in to editing and publishing a newspaper in your own town—but it isn't boresome, and a man can do some good."

"How long did you live in your present community?"

"Thirty years. My wife and I have nine children . . . grown and married now, except one. Financially, we had some lean years. There's a teacher, a preacher, a farmer, an engineer and a manufacturer in our family—and several housewives. Our children never had much luxury at home, but they learned early to earn their own money and to know the real size of a dollar. We tried to be rich in the better things of life—which we could better afford.

"I had a brother who never married. He's past fifty now. He never could understand why we were so devilish poor. I couldn't tell him, for he didn't have any basis for understanding. I did say one day, 'Jim, I don't wish you any bad luck—but 'twould be fine if you got married and had three children one after the other. Then you wouldn't wonder any more—you could answer your own question.'"

"You're familiar with Burns' 'Cotter's Saturday Night,'" I suggested. His face lighted.

"Yes. I guess perhaps a big family of good citizens is not the least thing a man can give his life to accomplishing."

JAPS AT GATES OF MANILA, NEAR BRITISH BASE

Claim Capture of Vital Port Only 190 Miles From Malayan Capital.

190 miles north of Singapore, continued yesterday, a British headquarters communique said today. (The Japanese claimed Kuantan fell yesterday morning.)

Some Japanese shelling of British positions and contact between small parties on the Perak front—in western Malaya—was noted by headquarters.

"One of our companies, supported by artillery, inflicted about 100 casualties on the enemy and destroyed a small enemy ammunition dump," its communique said. "Our casualties were slight."

Japanese aircraft made two raids on Singapore last night and slight damage was done to civilian property. The British said, adding that "so far 17 civilian casualties, killed or wounded, have been reported.

"There were no military casualties and no damage to military objectives," the communique reported.

Following loss of Kuching to the Japanese invaders, the British reported receipt of information that "the bulk of our troops has been successfully withdrawn from Sarawak(the "white rajah" kingdom making up part of British Borneo) and are in touch with the Netherlands East Indies forces in west Borneo."

Some damage to military objectives was acknowledged in a Japanese raid Dec. 30 upon Port Swettenham, on the Malayan east coast, and it was said that "slight temporary damage" had been caused to British communications in some further attacks.

Axis Claims 48 British Tanks Hit

ROME—(Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Forty-eight more British tanks have been destroyed and numerous armored cars were captured by Italian-German mechanized forces operating south of Agedabia, the high command said today.

"A new and favorable development" was announced in the fighting south of the Libyan town below Bengasi where Axis troops previously had been reported to have destroyed 74 British armored units.

"After violent artillery preparation," a communique said, "the enemy attacked our positions on the Salum (Egypt) and Baria (Libya) front with armored car units and air force formations. The enemy was beaten off. Fighting continues."

Report RAF Raid On Greek Capital

ROME—(Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—The Italian high command today reported an RAF raid on Athens and other Greek localities.

The daily war communique said no victims were reported and damages were light.

(The Italian high command had reported that British planes dropped incendiary bombs on the Athens area on Tuesday but did not at that time mention an attack against the Greek capital itself.)

Japs Claim Vital Malaya Port Seized

TOKYO (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Japanese capture of Kuantan, strategic port on the east coast of Malaya 190 miles north of Singapore, was announced today by the army section of Japanese imperial headquarters.

(That Japanese forces beating down the eastern side of the Malayan peninsula were in the Kuantan area had been admitted in yesterday's British headquarters communique from Singapore. Imperial headquarters said Kuantan fell to the Japanese yesterday morning.)

Its communique, issued by the army section and broadcast by Domei, said:

"Japanese forces advancing along the east cost of Malaya captured the strategic city and port of Kuantan, 190 miles north of Singapore, at 10:20 o'clock yesterday morning."

conspic... in a watch night service at the Church of St. Martin's In The Fields.

Scots in London, for whom "Hogmanay" is a greater festival than Christmas, felt the pinch of a whisky shortage as they drank their toasts in ginger beer and raisin wine.

There were no bombs, however, and for that Britons everywhere were grateful.

Of the three chief Axis countries, only the Japanese had victories to celebrate. But even in Tokyo, allowed alcoholic beverages to celebrate the recent fall of Hongkong, a sneak victory at Pearl Harbor, Japanese advances in Malaya and the imminent fall of Manila, a special blackout may have stirred misgivings about the outcome of a war which their leaders said would inevitably be long.

From partially conquered China Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's voice was heard in a New Year eve prophecy that while there might be new successes for Tokyo's aggression the Japanese thirst for conquest led them to drink poison which ultimately would kill them.

At the heart of the Axis, Germans faced the bitter pprospects raised by booming Russian victories on all eastern fronts.

Russians, on the contrary, gathered festively about New Year elm trees in their principal cities to make gifts to their children and celebrate what their ambassador in London, Ivan Maisky, called the turn of the tide against the Nazi invader.

No word came of any Italian celebration but persons recently returned from there pointed out that there was left to Italians neither the will, cause nor wherewithal to celebrate.

For the peoples of the Nazi-occupied countries the New Year brought only the prospects of famine and improverishment. Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan told the conquered French their future was uncertain and urged the beaten French army to be ready to serve "no matter what happens."

Reports Wild Ducks Have An Ear For Music

OAKLAND, Cal.—(INS)—Ducks, the wild variety, have an ear for music.

Pintails, bluebills and coots enjoy the swing and jazz of the modern tempo and obey that impulse to "come closer."

But the more stately members of the web-footed family, the widgeon, the sprig, the mallard, the teal, the lordly canvass back—these birds like classical airs.

Blanchfield carried a portable radio into his duck blind in the upper reaches of an Francisco Bay.

German submarines, seriously hindered Germany's shipbuilding program, and caused "immense damage" to the German cities of Kiel, Aachen and Munster.

The outstanding feature of 1941 operations, the ministry said, "has been the development of daylight offensives . . . which have driven deeper into Germany itself than any attacks by day on this country during the battle of Britain.

"These attacks kept large numbers of German air fighters away from the Russian front."

The air ministry said the fighter command maintained its pace of shooting down two Germans for one English plane while the Germans lost five to one in operations over England.

The war office, in its year-end summary, declared the army's major accomplishment of 1941 was the consolidation of Middle East positions from the Caucasus to Bengasi which put the British in direct touch "with our allies, Russia and Turkey."

For the first time, an authoritative source claimed the actual military destruction of the German Africa corps under command of General Erwin Rommel as well as 100,000 Italians in the current Libyan campaign.

"In the Middle East," the war office said, "the year 1941 has seen complete destruction of three Italian armies totaling about 650,000 men and a German force which, though small in numbers, (estimated at 47,000) was the elite of the German army."

The other Italian losses claimed by the British were Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's Libyan army of 250,000 men in last winter's operations and the entire Italian army of 300,000 wiped out in East Africa.

RUSSIANS BEGIN YEAR WITH ROUT

Germans in their retreat to the west, it was announced.

(A London military observer said this victory, correlated with the previous recapture of Volokolamsk, would permit Soviet troops to flank German-held Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of Moscow, from north and south.)

A special communique named both Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge, 59-year-old artillery specialist, and Guderian, "the phantom general" of Germany's armored drive into France, as leaders of vanquished units.

"After the rout near Tula of the second tank army under command of General Guderian," it said, "stubborn engagements resulted on the line of the Rivers Nara, Protva and Oka.

"Fortified positions of the fourth German army under Field Marshal von Kluge were broken through in many places."

Russian troops were said to have routed the 12th, 13th, 20th, 43rd, 53rd and 57th army corps, made up of 15 infantry divisions and a tank division and the reinforcing SS brigade.

Light was officially declared to have been shed on "the fantastic figures concerning the number of Red army men allegedly taken prisoner by the Germans" through seizure of a Dec. 12 order to the 101st motorized regiment, 18th German tank division.

This order, referring to the treatment of civilian populations, was quoted as saying that "all men capable of bearing arms must be detained and sent to war prisoner depots."

"The Germans will pay 100-fold for their violation of international law," a special Soviet communique declared.

Optimistic reports were made by Soviet leaders in New Year speeches as the people celebrated around colorfully decorated elm trees and children welcomed seasonal gifts.

President Michael Kalinin declared in a radio address:

"We are now fighting the Germans on equal terms. The enemy is in retreat and, on some parts of the front, actually on the run."

In Kuibyshev, Alexander Troyanovsky, former Soviet ambassador to the United States, suggested a toast to total defeat of the Axis in 1942 and the "victory of our country and all its allies."

(Ivan M. Maisky, Russian ambassador to Britain, said in London that the tide had turned in the Soviet-German struggle "and that means also in the war in general.")

The Walls Came Tumbling + +

By Joseph McCord
(Copyright, 1941.)

CHAPTER XXXI

Charlie Lennon had almost nothing to say during the first miles of his unexpected journey, and Carol made no effort to draw him into conversation. She imagined that he felt self-conscious over his unsuccessful revolt although she was a little disconcerted by the tears she had seen. They could have been due to excitement and physical weakness. She hoped he had been nursing a secret longing to have those treatments in spite of what he had said, and that the emotional reaction was happiness, in part at least.

Carol was thankful for her companion's silence at the start, for driving the two hundred miles and more was a great responsibility. She drove at a modest speed, and very carefully. By noon the tension had relaxed.

Charlie had begun to show appreciable interest in the landscape and was perfectly amenable to the sugestion of a hot dog and a bottle of soft drink. Carol also was surprised and relieved to discover that he apparently was familiar with motors and driving. He could be of no use physically if any trouble developed, but he would be able to advise her. That would be a great help. She also was glad that he asked no questions until late in the afternoon, when he came out with an abrupt query.

"Does Wige know I'm with you now? Mom said it was all right with him, but does he know I'm gone?"

"I talked it over with him some time ago," Carol answered evasively.

"But you said you were kidnapping me," he persisted. "I didn't see him this morning before he left."

"Well . . . He didn't know that we were going quite so soon," Carol admitted, staring closely at the road ahead. "Your mother and I fixed it as a sort of surprise."

"Oh."

"We're going to stop at some tourist camp before long," Carol continued hastily. "I don't want you to get too tired and I haven't driven this long before, not without rest. I wish you'd watch for a place that looks attractive to you. And you have a better chance than I to look them over."

Charlie evidently followed her instructions for he said nothing until they had gone several miles.

"There's a place on the right that doesn't seem bad, Carol."

She checked her speed and glanced at a well-painted house flanked by neat cabins.

"That does look attractive," she admitted, "and we don't have to cross the road to get in. We'll have a look at it."

She left Charlie in the car while she went to make inquiries. A matronly-looking woman answered the bell.

"I am taking a boy down to Siloam Springs for treatment," Carol explained, "and I want to break the trip so that he doesn't become too tired. Are your cabins heated?"

"Then I wish to engage two and I'd be glad if my patient could lie down and rest as soon as possible."

"You his nurse?"

"Not really. I'm a receptionist in his doctor's office." It wouldn't hurt to mention her old job again for the occasion. "There was no one else to bring him just now."

"Can he walk?"

"Not very easily. He wears a brace."

"I was just asking," the woman said kindly. "Because I think it would be better if you would put him in a downstairs bedroom I have. It's right next to the kitchen and it's good and warm. He can have his supper in bed if he likes. Let me show it to you."

"Oh, this will be very nice!" Carol exclaimed after a brief survey of the clean little room. "I'll help Charlie in right away."

"No you won't. My Charlie will bring him in . . . he's sitting in the kitchen." At her call, a big man entered leisurely.

"Want me, mother?"

"Pa, this lady has a lame boy out in the car. You fetch him right off and bring in their things, too. You can have a cabin if you like," she said to Carol, "but you'd better let me give you a room upstairs for tonight."

When Carol and her companion reached the car, Charlie said, "I can walk all right." The big man chuckled.

"Sure you can, young feller, but I'll show you a quicker way. Just you put your arm around my neck. I won't hurt hou . . . toted kids all my life pretty nearly. Set your bags out, miss. I'll bring 'em in for you, and if you'll leave your keys in the car I'll run her into the garage. You might's well go in and warm up. That wind's gettin' sorta chilly."

The hostess, who introduced herself as Mrs. Martin, took Carol to her room, bustling about in a capable fashion as she saw to it that everything was in readiness for its occupant.

"Such a nice-looking boy you have with you!" she exclaimed. "Such a pity he's so crippled. Has he been that way long?"

"Almost five years."

"You don't tell me. Well, I certainly am glad he can go down to Siloam. You'd never believe the cures they do for some of their folks. I've seen it with my own eyes. Plenty have stopped here coming and going in the last twelve years we've run this place."

"I hope they can help him," Carol sighed. So much depended on that, after all. "Mrs. Martin . . ." she said diffidently.

"Yes, dear?"

"I was just wondering . . . I've known Charlie since he was a baby, but . . ."

"Don't you worry. I know what you mean. My man will be glad to help the child get ready for bed whenever he wants to go and he'll attend to him in the morning, too. Don't you worry," she repeated.

"Oh, thank you!" It was a problem that had been worrying the girl for several hours. She was not sure just to what extent Charlie was able to do for himself in that regard. "I'll be very glad to pay Mr. Martin for extra service," she said.

"You'll do nothing of the kind! What sort of folks do you think we are around here, anyway? I've got three boys of my own. They're away on their own now . . . two of them married. But I'm thankful to say they've all been strong and healthy."

Charlie was agreeable to having his supper in bed and was pleased to learn that the amiable Mr. Martin had been a locomotive engineer. That fact put the two of them on a friendly footing at once. After she had eaten her meal, Carol discovered that she was weary from the day's strain and almost ready to retire. First, however, she tapped on Charlie's door to see whether he wanted something. He called her to come in. He was wearing gay new pajamas and seemed contented, propped against two pillows. Mr. Martin had placed a reading lamp on the bedstand and found a magazine for him to look at.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Comes a letter this bright new year from Irish McGee, operator of Possum Run golf course, who is spending the winter working in the Douglas Aircraft plant at Santa Monica, Calif.

Irish is right in the thick of the west coast excitement, right on the coast as a matter of fact, and with an anti-aircraft battery planted just up the street a way, and practically in his back yard.

"But we think nothing of it," says the Irish blossom from Possum, "they've got those anti-aircraft guns in every vacant lot out here."

McGee says he gets a bang out of the big badges and windshield stickers used by all the Chinese and Filipinos on the coast to make sure no one mistakes their nationality.

But they don't really need those nationality tags, Irish points out, "for the Japs disappeared from the markets and streets almost over night after war started."

I take it Irish means to convey the idea that the Japs are in hiding, and that they didn't just disappear because they finally found something to be ashamed of.

McGee says his employment at Douglas "sure is interesting work now that the plant is fully protected under army supervision. No one can get within three blocks of the plant without an army pass. People living within that area must have a pass, even high school children. So if a fellow took on too much Xmas cheer and lost his pass he could not make it home even if he could walk."

Why, Mr. McGee! I take it a guy can still pass out at will but he must have the army's permission to pass in.

* * *

Clippings of two popular ads in west coast papers were included in the McGee manuscript.

One listed BLACKOUT MATERIAL—35c yd.

Another advertised AIR RAID SHELTERS. "Plan now to provide adequate air raid or bomb shelters for every purse and purpose. Portable and permanent structures erected and equipped fully."

I could see some purpose for a bomb shelter, but I wouldn't need one for my purse. It's been bombed so often it's blast-happy.

* * *

But those portable shelters "equipped fully," would be a mighty fine thing for the golfers during the hail storms at Possum. The full equipment in that case should include a few practice greens for the 19th hole.

Hoosier Hoopsters Claim Good Record

BLOOMINGTON, Ind —(INS)— Indiana university's basketball team today launched its fourth campaign under Coach Branch McCracken boasting the best three-season record of any Big Ten quintet.

* * *

The Hoosiers have won 28 contests and dropped only eight to Western Conference foes since big Mac took over the reins in 1938 to succeed Everett Dean, who went to Stanford.

* * *

McCracken, who first learned to play basketball in a little town named [illegible]rovia, has seen his hardwood [illegible]ars gain at least one victor[illegible] every other Big Ten team [illegible] his three seasons as a co[illegible] the league. In [illegible] Indiana led the Big Ten [illegible] scoring with a total of 50[illegible]s and finished in second [illegible]n the standings; the follow[illegible]ar the Mackmen captured [illegible]ational intercollegiate crown and swept their two-game series with Purdue for the first time in history; and last season the Hurrying Hoosiers again placed second in the league and won the Sugar Bowl crown by defeating Kentucky at New Orleans.

Tyger Five Returns To Action

Battle Akron West Here Tomorrow Night.

THE holidays end tomorrow night for Mansfield high school's bucket tossing Tygers when they tangle with the Cowboys from Akron West, another basketball team that'll be looking for revenge for a football defeat of the past season, this one 40 to 0 in the season's opener.

The Tygers returned to the practice floor Monday afternoon, and they've been looking so good after their vacation that Coach Vern Hoffman has decided to give them another holiday today.

"This looks like the kind of team that won't need too much practice after it gets its plays down pat, and gets its defensive system worked out," Hoffman declared in explaining the no-practice sign hung out for today.

"Now that they're geting their shooting eyes, they seem to go better after a rest, when they're fresh, than they do with daily practice sessions," he continued, "so this week we've worked on plays and a shifting man-to-man defense When we get our plays and defense down, I may give them a rest every now and then."

Hoffman was cheered this week by the return to action of Ken Krupp, who was recuperating from an attack of influenza and missed the Collinwood game The Tyger tutor is counting on using Krupp and Robinson at guards after Jack Shiplet graduates at mid-year and expects to let both see plenty of action before that time.

The Tyger reserves, who meet Ontario in the preliminary game tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, have also been getting full length practice sessions this week under the watchful eye of Coach Vere Smith.

They've been taking the floor for three hours each morning, while the first team has been using the court in the afternoons

Akron West hasn't played many games yet and Coach Hoffman says he doesn't know much about the caliber of tomorrow night's opponent, aside from the fact that he's heard the Cowboys have a big team. Eligibility lists sent here fail to show any of the players on last year's West team.

Officials for tomorrow night's games will be Coach Harold Anderson of Toledo university and Charley Cupp, former Toledo U. forward.

Badgers and Cats Drop Cage Tilts

CHICAGO—(AP)—Two of the Big Ten basketball conference's outstanding teams — Champion Wisconsin and Northwestern — were victim's of too much New Year eve revelry by the opposition.

Non-conference foes knocked off three Big Ten quintets, Purdue alone giving the league a victory, while the results of the night's engagements brought to the idle Minnesota aggregation top honors for the pre-conference encounters.

Wisconsin, Big Ten and national collegiate champion, suffered its first defeat in 20 games, losing to the invading Dartmouth five at Milwaukee, 57 to 19. The Badgers' winning streak included four games this season.

Notre Dame was the second out-of-league foe to polish off an unbeaten conference team, rallying in the last half to whip Northwestern, 40 to 36. The loss was the Wildcats' first in four starts and gave the Irish an edge in the series, 16 to 13

Purdue maintained the conference's high standard by soundly trouncing the touring Texas A. and M. quintet, 53 to 31. In the fourth game, Michigan dropped its third tilt in four starts, Marquette winning, 49 to 42 in the first game of the double-header at Milwaukee.

MIAMI BOXERS TAKE ON LEADING COLLEGES

OLD TIME RELIGION

COLUMBIA Mo —(INS)— Educators at Stephens college here have been so besieged with student requests for advice in religion and philosophy that they have set up a clinic in the religious education department to which the college's young women are flocking for individual conferences.

Clubs Set for Orleans Battle

Rams and Tigers Draw Biggest Bowl Crowd.

NEW ORLEANS —(AP)—After a month of taking bumps on the practice field, posing for photographers, giving interviews and autographs and reading a few hundred thousand words about themselves, The Sugar Bowl football teams of Fordham and Missouri had nothing to do today but play the game.

The clubs came into New Orleans from their Mississippi Gulf coast training camps, all set to clash at 2:15 p. m. before 73,000 spectators the largest Bowl crowd of the day, since the Rose Bowl was shifted to Durham, N. C. The teams remained on the coast last night to avoid the hilarious New Year eve celebration here.

Both coaches rated their squads physically and mentally ready.

This eighth annual Sugar Bowl game bore promise of being the most spectacular of all the series, and every one has been a thriller. Never before has the classic paired two teams with such wide-open and effective attacks.

At least half a dozen flashy backs were capable of taking their places along side such all-time Sugar Bowl heroes as Monk Simon,s of Tulane, Sammy Baugh and Davv O'Brien of TCU, Nello Falachi of Santa Clara, John Kimbrough of Texas A. and M. and Charlie O'Rourke of Boston college.

Missouri had its three great running backs, Bob Steuber, Maurice Wade and Harry Ice, who averaged 6.45 yards per try among them during the season and made 22 touchdowns on runs that averaged 37 yards.

Fordham had Steve (Flipper) Filipowicz, who has thrown 101 passes for a 722-yard total; a pair of five-yard plus ballicarriers in Jim Blumenstock and Joe Andrejco, and other dangerous backs.

Local bet-takers were asking 6-5 on each team, but local sports writers favored Missouri by a narrow margin. They were impressed by the Tigers' 226 points to opponents' 37, by 3,104 yards gained in nine games, by a first-string line that didn't allow a touchdown and a backfield that intercepted 28 passes.

POSTS 6-1 ODDS

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)— Betting odds on the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer heavyweight title tight in New York January 9 opened with the champion a 6 to 1 favorite in San Francisco. The betting commissioner posted even money that Baer would go five rounds and even money that he wouldn't last six.

Miami Bowl Has Sellout

Sinkwich Matches Skill Against T. C. U. Threats.

MIAMI, Fla. —(AP)— Georgia's All-American Frankie Sinkwich matched his flying feet and deadly passing arm today against one of the nation's great money teams. Texas Christian university, before a sell-out crowd in Miami's Orange Bowl.

The Youngstown, O., marvel, whose running and passing brought the Bulldogs their best season in years, had his work cut out for him in meeting the Christians, who scored a late-season upset of mighty Texas.

Interest was high in the prospective duel between Sinkwich and a strong T. C. U. cast headed by such stars as Kyle Gillespie and Emery Nix, the sophomore sensation who threw the pass that beat Texas. All the stadium's 35,000 seats were sold days before the game.

Besides Sinkwich, the Bulldogs rallied on boys liks Lamar Davis, speedy wingback with season touchdown runs of 85, 54, 45 and 25 yards to his credit, and right end Van Davis, who ranked 20th in the country in number of passes caught.

The presence of Gillespie, back in uniform after being out much of the season, and T. C. U.'s reputation for playing its best in important games seemed likely to make the Horned Frogs no worse than an even-money bet. Early odds favored Georgia but they gradually lessened as the game drew near.

The Frogs carried a perfect bowl record of three victories with them into today's game.

In at least one respect, the Georgians expected to hold a definite edge. Their ace place kicker, Leo Costa, has made good 33 out of 38 extra points pattempts this season.

High-Scoring Dukes Battle Beaver Defense

Transplanted Rose Bowl Game Plays To 56,000 Customers Today

By FRANK B. GILBRETH

DURHAM, N. C.—(AP)—One of Dixie's largest football crowds rolled into Duke's horseshoe stadium today to see a Rose Bowl game played in their own back yard.

The contest, whisked here from the west coast because of the war, will be the old story of a high-geared offense against a won't-budge defense.

It will match the Dukes of Durham, who scored 311 points during their regular season of nine games, against the Beavers of Oregon State, who yielded only 33 points in nine games.

* * *

The pine-fringed stadium was sold out 72 hours after the game was moved to Durham, and Duke plans somehow to sardine 56,000 paying customers and 2,000 deadheads into the 35,000 capacity concrete stands and into temporary bleachers.

* * *

The solid south has cast a three-touchdown vote for wily Wallace Wade, Blue Devil coach who demonstrated nine times this season that he can't be beaten when he puts up his Dukes.

Even the betting boys, whose conclusions are based on something more practical than sectional loyalty, have made the Blue Devils two-touchdown favorites.

Oregon State backers, however, weren't singing the blues. They told all who would listen that, although their club had been defeated twice, it had played in a much tougher league than had Duke.

* * *

Both squads took light workouts yesterday, and both Wade and Coach Lon Stiner of Oregon State gave the same answers to the usual pre-game questions.

* * *

They guessed their squads were in pretty good condition; yep, their boys were determined to win; the strategy they'd employ would depend on what the other guy pulled out of the hat; they couldn't predict the outcome of the game, because there was no basis to compare the teams.

The only cripple on either squad was Moffat Storer. Duke sub back who runs 100 yards in less than 10 seconds. He has a bad knee, but may see some action.

* * *

Stiner was a little worried about the "mental attitude" of his men. The tough trip from the west coast and the training ground 3,000 miles away from home base seem to have had their effect, he said.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — The column has not commented on the speech of Mr. Churchill before our American legislature because there is so much to think about in the speech and its setting that hair-trigger emotion and enthusiasm aroused by its masterful art might discharge the wrong gun-barrel.

An an oratorical effort it was superb. It had an even greater quality. It was a frank, free exposure of the guiding thoughts of an honest and able statesman. Those are very rare qualities at the moment in a double - crossing world.

Gen. Johnson.

Perhaps, in view of all this, there is a kind of curmudgeon quality in questioning it at all. But, after all, we are Americans. Our national interest is not completely adjourned. There is a right and a duty to examine such momentous words that may effect our whole destiny.

Mr. Churchill did not plainly say so but his speech slanted in the direction of some sort of national amalgamation of us with Britain after the war. Once, earlier, when asked the British aims, he said something like this: "To smash Hitler. We will talk of other aims afterward."

The latter is the only answer that makes sense. How can we tell what shall be done with shattered remnants of what used to be until we have seen them? More bunk is being uttered on this subject than on any other. Our aim is to win this war. It is a scattering of willpower, determination and effort to think now of any other object.

Mr. Churchill said: "Five or six years ago it would have been easy without shedding a drop of blood for the United States and Great Britain to have insisted on the disarmament clauses of the treaty which Germany signed after the great war."

This column has been saying something like that during that whole six years—since its first issue—more than six years ago. But there was this difference. That treaty put Germany under the absolute domination of England and France—not America. With the greatest land forces in the world supported by smaller nations France had ringed Germany with a wall of steel and England controlled the oceans.

Our part had been done in 1918 by putting those two nations in that position through victory. Any interference on our part in Europe in most of those years would have been resented by England herself—even while those two nations were letting slip through their fingers the advantage we had helped win for them.

We have nothing to apologize for ourselves—much less to be reproached for by others. We can't much blame Mr. Churchill for this aside considering the number of our own "thinkers" who are daily chanting the same nonsense.

Finally, in answering why Malaya and the Far East are not sufficiently equipped to resist Japan, Mr. Churchill points to a sufficient equipment to win British victories in North Africa and says they could not equip both places and had to choose.

Indirectly, and with great generosity, he said that our "disadvantages" in the Pacific were due to somewhat the same causes—our effort to help the British Libyan campaign and aid in the battle of the Atlantic had left our forces at Pearl Harbor and in the Philippines insufficiently equipped.

What Mr. Churchill is talking about is the perfectly sound military policy against dispersion and in favor of concentration of forces at critical points. O. K. but isn't there a point to be pleaded in our own behalf when our whole Pacific defense system becomes so seriously involved?

As facts become clearer it begins to appear that Pearl Harbor was one of the greatest single naval and aerial disasters in recent history. We have no dependable base to support our beleaguered little force in the Philippines and now it seems that our hope for a secondary base at Singapore is far from secure. There is such a thing as too much concentration on the front door, leaving the rear entrance an open gate. We rejoice with the British on Bengasi but, if Mr. Churchill is right, we paid a perilous penalty in the Pacific. We still have our own country to defend also.

Warns of Attempt to Shell West Coast

STREET, SEWER PROJECTS COST CITY $200,000

Engineer's Report Reveals City Has 73 Miles of Paved Thoroughfares.

More than $200,000 was spent during 1941 for the repair and construction of Mansfield streets, sewers and waterlines, according to the annual report of W. C. Statler, city engineer.

Statler said that $84,500 was spent for new streets alone and that work done during the year left the city with 73.8 miles of paved streets and 29.4 miles of unpaved ones.

Mansfield spent $18,400 for the construction of new sewers, $16,400 going for new sanitary sewers and $2,000 for storm sewers.

Federal aid was given for the construction of new watermains. The total cost of new waterline projects during the year was $89,400 with the city paying $49,800 of the total.

Mansfield also spent $1,500 to replank the Mulberry street viaduct and $5,000 to have a section of its police and fire signal cable transferred from poles to an underground conduit. The federal government contributed $1,600 of the $2,000 needed to make a survey of house numbering in the city.

In addition to the paving of ten streets, 170 others and 97 alleys were oiled during the summer. The oiling was carried out over 29 miles of streets and eight miles of alleys.

The 1941 program leaves the city with 34.1 miles of brick streets, 1.32 of asphalt block, 20.8 of asphalt sheet, .19 of wood block, .17 of granite block, .5 of waterbound gravel, 14 of tarbound gravel and 10.66 miles on concrete streets.

Statler also reported that the city had .33 miles of brick walks, 16.69 miles of cinder and gravel walks and 95.25 miles of flagstone and cement walks.

During 1941, the city built 9,787 feet of new sanitary sewers bringing the total to 97.9243 miles and 2,856 feet of storm sewers bringing that total to 30.7935 miles. Forty-two manholes were made for sanitary sewers and six for storm sewers bringing the totals to 1,704 for sanitary sewers and 223 for storm sewers.

In the waterworks department, 24,498 feet of new waterlines was built in 1941 bringing the total to 104.423 miles. The city brought the total number of fire hydrants up to 557.

Up and Down THE STREET

Mansfield's police must be the most popular people in town. At least they're claiming all records for receiving New Year greetings between midnight and dawn. Police Lieutenant Jesse Schwab said the department telephone rang constantly from 12 o'clock on, this morning, as well-wishers called in their greetings. Could be that the city's merry-makers knew for sure that the police were one set of people certain to answer their phone, regardless of the hour.

Familiar sounds will echo throughout the Y. W. C. A. next week as tap dancing classes are resumed after the holiday period. The workman's hammer and saw that have resounded through the building since the remodeling program began will continue to be heard until the work is completed but the sound will be augmented by that of regular organization activities. Jack Berger will be in charge of tap classes for children 6 to 10 years of age and Wanda Hess will act as accompanist.

Postcards from Pearl Harbor brought good news today to two Mansfield families. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thoma, 498 Louise avenue, received word from their nephew, Stephen J. Thoma, 27, an electrician's mate aboard the U. S. S. Arizona for a year, that he is safe and well. George Cicolani, 19, one member of the Mansfield family that has contributed five sons to the nation's armed services, advised a brother here that he is "all right." He was an electrician on the U. S. S. West Virginia.

Two Mansfielders were talking yesterday about their college days and one of them, who went to Kenyon, said he had an absent-minded professor story to end all absent-minded professor stories. The pedagogue, he related, learned of a building being demolished near his home. He carted a substantial pile of shingles from the demolition scene to his basement for use as kindling. But for weeks he complained that the shingles were worthless as fuel. Finally one of his students went to investigate. The shingles were asbestos and fireproof.

NIMITZ TALKS TO PRESS ON U. S. SUBMARINE

Says It Would Be Easy For Undersea Craft To Attack Pacific Cities.

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, new commander of the United States Pacific fleet, warns that Japanese submarines operating off the West Coast of the United States might attempt to shell coastal cities.

Speaking to reporters aboard a big new submarine yesterday just three hours after he assumed command, Admiral Nimitz said "it's relatively safe and simple for a submarine to arise to the surface near a port and throw a few shells into a city.

"It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that Japanese submarines operating off the West Coast of the United States may attempt to lay their shells into cities before they leave."

The ocean, he added, is "too big to prevent it entirely."

A reporter asked the significance of submarine shelling of three points in the Hawaiian islands the night of Dec. 30. Admiral Nimitz replied that "Japanese captains desire to make the utmost use of their weapons when there are no targets for their torpedoes."

The setting for the admiral's first press conference after taking over his new command was colorful and unique in many respects. It was said to be one of the few times in the history of the fleet that a commander's four-star flag had flown from a submarine.

Before inviting reporters questions on the sun-drenched deck of the underseas monster, Nimitz pinned the navy cross on two pilots of a flying boat that rescued nine army fliers from the sea only last night. It was his first official act as commander in chief.

The tall, affable Texan showed an air of confidence but gave no sign of over-confidence. Speaking slowly and deliberately and with quiet dignity he volunteered this assertion at the end of the conference:

"You asked several questions about the future, many of them no doubt pressing. I'm a kamaaina (Old timer in Hawaii) myself and I'd like to reply in a Hawaiian word. This word is Hoomanawanue, meaning 'Let time take care of the situation.'

Hawaii-wise reporters also offered these alternative translations: "Time will tell." "Be patient."

Asked about the possibilities of an attack on Hawaii if Japan succeeds in taking Manila and the Philippines, Nimitz took a long pause and replied:

"An attack on these islands is always possible. We will do our utmost to keep them from falling into enemy hands. The Pacific fleet is doing and will do the utmost possible."

START CHECK OF CITY'S VOTERS

Election Officials To Survey Records, Determine Those Not Eligible To Vote.

Richland county election board clerks next week will begin a check of the board's registrations to determine who hasn't voted at the last two elections and whether the voter of one party may have been credited by mistake with voting the opposing ticket at the last primary.

After the check is completed, notices will be mailed to persons who have failed to vote in the last two years, telling them that they must re-register to be eligible to vote at the next election.

Residents of the city who failed to vote at a general or special election or primary during the past two years will be required to register again to be eligible to cast their ballots at the 1942 primary. The state law formerly required electors to vote at one or more general elections in two years to retain their voting eligibility.

The board clerks will go over more than 20,000 names of registered voters before sending out the notices and removing any names from the board lists.

The board keeps a record of the political affiliations of voters as designated at party primaries so that an elector can't switch from one party to the other with the intent of helping to nominate a supposedly weak candidate or defeat a strong one on the opposing ticket.

LOANS AVAILABLE FOR COUNTY FARMERS TO REPAIR MACHINERY

The Richland county office of the Farm Security administration will do its part in the "food for freedom" program by loaning money to farmers to pay for repair of farm machinery so it will be ready to start the 1942 crop season early.

The loans will be available to present FSA clients or any others who can qualify for loans, County FSA Supervisor J. Alden Payn said.

"These loans are to insure that production of foodstuffs by families cooperating with the FSA will not be curtailed next year because of badly worn or broken-down farm machinery," Payn said.

"Machinery is going to be scarcer as this war goes on, and without doubt prices of farm implements will get steadily higher. The cost of parts will be higher, too, so it will pay every farmer to check over his machinery now and make necessary repairs."

Payn said eligible borrowers also may obtain money for the purchase of new and used machinery, if necessary, although joint purchase and use of new equipment by several families is being urged because of the anticipated shortage of farm equipment next spring.

The FSA announcement of loans for machinery repairs is in line with a campaign opened recently by the county defense board to put Richland county farm equipment in condition for producing more food next summer for democratic nations at war.

Congressional Leaders Say War Goal Attainable.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Congressional leaders in defense and fiscal legislation today voiced belief that President Roosevelt's goal of spending $50,000,000,000 for the war effort next year can be realized, but only through major sacrifices by all classes of people.

Details of the presidential program, which calls roughly for a 33 per cent increase in war production, are expected to be bared next week when Mr. Roosevelt submits the annual budget to the new session of congress.

Some senators who foresee a five-year war said the plan indicates that the ultimate cost of a smashing American victory may be $250,000,000,000 — a sum far greater than the $150,000,000,000 "victory program" previously discussed by defense experts.

Kunkle, who has been teaching a course in meat-cutting at Ohio State, will demonstrate the best and most economical ways to cut beef and pork for home use and for curing. A discussion period will afford an opportunity to ask questions about any phase of butchering and meat care.

The session will be open to rural and city residents alike, Miss Bay said. It will be the only demonstration of its kind here this winter, she said.

City's 'Nixie' Mail Less This Year Says Postoffice

In spite of the biggest holiday mailing rush the Mansfield postoffice has ever had, there was less "nixie" mail this year than there was last year, according to Harry Zellner, superintendent of mails.

Explaining the term "nixie" as one used by mailing room employes to designate illegible or undeliverable mail, Zellner said that this year there were less than a dozen packages undelivered after the Christmas rush.

This year's "nixie" letter mail was not as numerous as last year's either, with only 1,500 letters classed as "nixie" mail to date, as compared with 2,000 letters last year.

Postmaster H. E. Homberger explained that when the mail was sorted, those letters which appeared undeliverable were placed in a "nixie" box and given directory service in an effort to locate the recipient.

If all attempts to locate recipient fails "nixie" mail is then formally destroyed.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

BROADWAY'S tireless chroniclers have compared the street to a vast variety of things. The wide-eyed ones think of it as an incredible wonderland where implausible and lovely adventures happen all the time. The cynics talk about the broken hearts that line Broadway's side streets, and the tinsel makeshift of its bright lights. The realists view it knowingly as an out-sized thoroughfare where people work and play and make love as they do on any Main Street.

Kilgallen

Sometimes I have a picture of Broadway that's different from any of these. Sometimes I see the street as a great menagerie, crowded with human equivalents of the members of the animal kingdom in any well-stocked zoo. In habits and habitates, sometimes even in appearance, a lot of Broadway folk resemble our cousins of the land, sea and air—who differ only in that they haven't achieved as complex and well-reported a community life as Gotham's specimens.

Consider the Broadway brother of the wolf type, for a starter. Lean, sinister and predatory (and often from Hollywood), the town's wolves prey on the delicious little lambs who venture into the Broadway jungle, sometimes hunting in packs, more often following the rogue male custom of stalking solo. Some of them disguise themselves in sheep's clothing, others, as the Broadway line runs, merely in cheap clothing. A larger number than you'd imagine are themselves only sheep in disguise, trying desperately to be ever so dangerous without much success. We won't name them here, but any close followers of the midnight scene can recite their own list of names.

Broadway's version of the lion is the social lion. This is a magnificent beast of either sex found usually in the more expensive East Side clubs. Sometimes this lion is a domestic brand, like Mrs. Harrison Williams, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, or any of the Astors. More often it's an exotic foreign species, with Prince or Count or Duke preceding its name. The female of the species is heavily furred and encrusted with precious stones, and communicates with her mates by shouting "Dar-a-aarling!" across the remote reaches of cafes and night clubs. The males, usually less openly aggressive than their consorts, often sport small mustaches and British or other foreign accents.

A whole family of Broadway's bestiary is the alligator clan. Called 'gators or "gates" for short, they wear saddle shoes, anklets, sweaters and odd hats. The alligators have a language of their own, by which they may readily be recognized ("solid sender," "gut bucket" and "out of the world" are some of the commoner phrases) and they boast a primitive religion of which the high gods are dieties named Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw and Count Basie. This species is fairly common throughout the United States.

Then there is the bird family, as vast and variegated Broadway group. One of the most populous branches are the songbirds, who make sweet the night with their song and flitter from bistro to bistro followed by a covey of devoted satellites. There is the Boswell-bird, the Moffettt-bird, and the Hildegarde-bird in the thrush family; the Lily Pons-bird is the best example among the larks; and there are mocking birds, which include ladybirds with tongues in cheek.

TALK TODAY

Roosevelt, Churchill Resume Inter-Allied Conferences.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill were scheduled to resume their inter-allied war conferences today, the day set aside by Mr. Roosevelt for Americans to pray for "God's help in the days to come."

New Year's day offered little prospect for a holiday at the White House as Churchill returned from a quick trip to Canada. The precarious position of the Philippines and the defense of Singapore, were certain to be uppermost in the minds of the two leaders and their high commands as another year began.

The exact time of Churchill's arrival in Washington today was a closely guarded secret, as was the church to which he and Mr. Roosevelt were expected to go sometime today to pray for divine guidance in the prosecution of the war against the Axis.

BOARD ORDERS PARK ANNEXED

Commissioners Approve City Request On Liberty Park.

Papers filed with city council yesterday show that Richland county commissioners have granted the city's request that Liberty park be annexed to the city.

The park was purchased by the Liberty Park association several years ago. Later it was developed through WPA funds. The association deeded the park to the city but before the land could be officially annexed, it was necessary to make application to the county commissioners.

Credo Adopted For New Year By Club Head

National Federation of Business and Professional Women's club came into existence during the last war for the purpose of aiding the government to obtain vital information on the various type of work performed by women at that time. The same type of information and service is being carried out now by the special Defense committees in each club through the master file. Occupational training of each member as well as her experience is on record at the national office. The Mansfield Business and Professional Women's club was organized in 1924 This year it pledges itself to participation in the program of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., to "Strengthen Democracy for Defense," which is the general theme for the year.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Gruber, president, as an American woman gainfully employed outside her home, adopted this Credo for 1942:

I reaffirm my faith in the fundamental freedoms, which are the goals of the United States of America.

I pledge myself to build and conserve my health so that I may be strong and useful to my community and my country.

I pledge myself to be an intelligent and willing tax payer to help finance the all-out American Defense effort.

I pledge myself to war against waste so that I may buy war savings stamps and bonds in the service of my country and contribute financially to other work.

I pledge myself to register at the local Civilian Defense Volunteer bureau for assignment to volunteer defense work.

I pledge myself to use my skill as a business woman to further the Arsenal of Democracy.

I pledge myself to be an alert consumer.

I pledge myself to be tolerant and to promote tolerance in others and refrain from unfair criticism.

I pledge myself to believe in and work for the triumph of right in the present world conflict.

Bible Class Has Dinner Party at North Lake Park

Miss Naomi Boyce, former Mansfield resident who is now doing missionary work in North Carolina, was the guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Berean Bible class of the Grace Gospel church held recently in the North Lake park pavilion. Shoppers Wise And Shoppers Foolish

Clothes may not make the man, but the wrong ones unmake the woman. A dowdy lady is a sad sight. She lacks taste, apparently has no appreciation of line and color. She has a gift for selecting the unbecoming hat or garment. And when she gets it she doesn't know how to wear it. The tilt of the hat is a big item.

There is the impulsive buyer. She gets rid of a lot of money, never has a really satisfactory wardrobe. A green coat seizes her fancy; she can't live without it. But when she gets it home it makes her best blue frock look sick and when she wears it with her hed hat she is a stop-and-go signal, feels as if she should stand in the middle of the street and direct traffic. Her wardrobe is thrown out of color gear.

What then? More pilgrimages to the dry goods marts to find a frock and a hat that will make friends with the green coat and live in peace with it. Selecting clothes should be a serious occupation, not a casual diversion. One has to use the old head, use it with wisdom. It does not pay to have orphan dresses hanging in the clothes closet, never worn.

There is a rule that can be applied to wearing apparel, be it coat, hat or frock; when in doubt, turn and run away so you will not be tempted. Unless a garment excites you, it is not worth considering. Don't ever say, "Oh, that will do." Keep on looking. Pay no heed to the slick talk of the high pressure saleswoman. You know what you will feel comfortable in. A dress should look as if it loves you, is happy to be worn by you.

Be suspicious of the fussy frock, the over-decorated one. Ornaments may appeal at first, but unless they are tiptop you'll grow tired of them.

Of a simple robe with beautiful lines, rich fabric and flattering color, a woman never tires. When the seams break, she still adores it.

Economy may force the buyer to consider wear, but equally important is suitability. And no doubt you have discovered that some dresses carry with them a depressing influence in color or cut or fabric. Avoid them as you would the plague. The gay little models cost no more; they will give you a pleasureable uplift.

The dress sense can be cultivated by even the dowdiest woman. It is a matter of giving the subject a little study, looking at the offerings in the shops, observing the get up of well-groomed women. The stores have marvelous offerings, and at reasonable prices.

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

If you like to sew, yet like to finish quickly, make a Marian Martin apron! You have your choice of two styles in Pattern 9931—apron A is like a child's pinafore, with contrasting ruffles at the shoulders and hem. Don't you like the ric-rac "border" on the center panel? In apron B, which is made all of one fabric, the ruffles are omitted and the pockets and center panel outlined with ric-rac. A third version, apron C, may use narrow ruffle trim on the bodice and pockets. Make this apron up in perky cotton . . . it's so practical for work because the back bodice buttons together!

Pattern 9931 may be ordered only in sizes small (32-34), medium (36-38) and large (40-42). Small size, view A, requires 1⅝ yards 35 inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrast; view B, 2⅜ yards 35 inch fabric and 2⅞ yards ric-rac.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I ROSE abruptly from my chair, took Noel's coat lapels firmly in my hands and looked compellingly at him.

"No, no," I said with emphasis. "Mary has no more wish to get a divorce than you have. She meant every word of her affectionate telephone greeting to you this morning. And I can assure you that she is very much in love with you. There is no possible reason for you to doubt her."

"Then what did you mean?" His eyes were puzzled, troubled, although the frenzied despair which was his first reaction to my clumsy approach had disappeared. "You said—"

"Go back to your chair, Noel," I said crisply, "and put a rein on your fears. I am to blame for having approached my task so clumsily. I do not wonder that you imagined all sorts of horrors."

Secretly, however, I was overjoyed at the way he had mistaken my meaning. He had jumped at a conclusion so much worse than the truth that for the first time I had a faint hope that I might be able to make him accept the exceedingly trying role which my father had mapped out for him.

He walked to his chair and sat down in it, with a bewildered, mechanical docility which made my pulses constrict with pity.

"I am afraid I am too ready to imagine anything at any time," he said slowly. "But I do not wish to hinder you in what evidently is an important errand. I promise you I shall listen quietly to whatever you have to say to me. I won't break out that way again; you may depend on it."

"You are making my task much easier, Noel," I said, "and please believe that I am grateful. Now I wish to ask a question or two of you, and then I will tell you what my errand is."

"Ask anything you wish," he said with emphasis, "and I will answer you to the best of my ability."

I gathered my courage in both hands and advanced to the fray.

"Mary told you, did she not," I began, "that she discovered some very startling things concerning Stephen Redfield?"

Noel Skeptical

He started violently at the name, as I feared he would, but made a visible and successful effort at self-control.

"She told me a lot of tripe," he said, with an air of tolerant skepticism. "Either she was letting her imagination run away with her, or that—that Gadarene swine was stringing her along for some reason of his own."

"Will it change your opinion any," I asked slowly at last, "if I tell you that my father regards the information Mary gleaned as possessing great value, and that he has received corroborative evidence of what Mary found out, from Nancy Carew and from other sources?"

"Nancy Carew," he repeated in astonishment. Then he sat up quickly in his chair.

"I'm all at sea about this," he said. "Mary was pretty sketchy and vague in her story, and I have heard nothing from anyone else."

"Would you like me to tell you all about the thing from the beginning?" I asked quietly.

"If you only would," he returned fervently. "Only," he qualified quickly, "I'd rather not hear much about the way Mary secured this information."

His tone held a bitterness which told me the vision of his wife and Redfield dining together so frequently was still hateful to him.

But I knew that I must not allow that wound to fester. Slashing across it with a sharp knife was the only possible remedy, and I grasped the weapon firmly.

"But that is just what I must explain to you, Noel," I said. "I must tell you not only Mary's methods, but her reasons for employing them."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

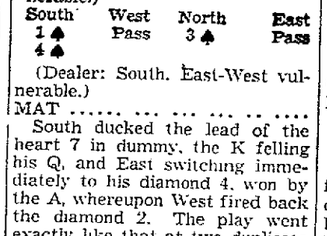
"The Authority on Authorities"

A GOOD RESOLUTION

A bridge player desirous of improving his game could not start the year with a better resolution than this: "I hereby resolve never again to make a bid or play a card without first reflecting, at least briefly, upon the significance attached to the last bid or play by my partner or opponents? In other words, I will not act first and think afterwards, but will do my thinking before I act."



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

MAT ....

South ducked the lead of the heart 7 in dummy, the K felling his Q, and East switching immediately to his diamond 4, won by the A, whereupon West fired back the diamond 2. The play went exactly like that at two duplicate tables, then varied.

One declarer called the diamond K from dummy, and East ruffed with the spade 2. The diamond Q was now set up for West, and after East returned the heart 10 to the A, South discarding the diamond 7, the declarer was in for trouble. If he led a spade from the dummy, to his A, he could next ruff one club. If he used another spade to reach his hand again, he could not ruff both other clubs. If he ruffed a second one then, he could discard either a club or a diamond on the heart J, but not both, and so would have to lose the setting trick.

The other South, when the diamond 2 was led by West to the third trick, reckoned clearly. If East had the Q left, he would not have led the suit, but would have waited for a possible finesse. Hence South called the J from dummy. When East ruffed this, the K was still high. East returned the heart 10, the sole losing diamond being put on the heart A. Two high trumps left dummy two to ruff clubs, plus the heart J on which to park the third club, so the contract was made. It was solely because South stopped to reflect that, if East had the diamond Q he would not have been likely to lead up to the K-J.

Rice Baked With Cheese Economy Dish

By BETSY NEWMAN

I'm giving you a very simple and economical menu today, as it is just before another feast day. Baked Rice and Cheese is a dish that you should keep in your repertoire, so to speak, for lunch or supper.

Today's Menu.
Baked Rice and Cheese
Scalloped Tomatoes
Apple, Cabbage, and Celery Salad
Baked Orange Pudding
Tea or Coffee

Baked Rice and Cheese

Three cups cooked rice, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk, 2 cups cheese, cayanne, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, bread crumbs.

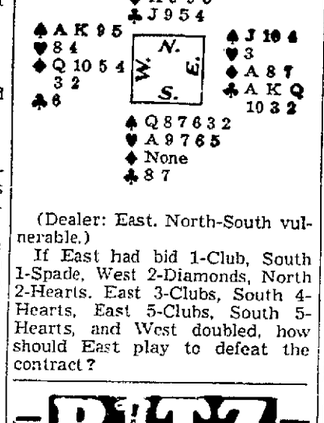
Put a layer of cooked rice in greased baking dish, cover with layer of grated cheese, season with salt and cayanne. Continue adding layers until dish is almost full. Add enough milk to come half way to the top of rice, cover with crumbs, dot with butter ,and bake in moderate oven until crumbs are brown. Use temperature of 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Baked Orange Pudding.

One-third cup sugar, 3 tablespoons bread crumbs, 1 cup milk, grated rind and strained juice 1 orange.

Beat egg thoroughly and add orange and sugar; scald milk and pour over crumbs; add first mixture and, when well mixed, pour into baking dish and bake until set like custard. Serve sold. Serves 2 or 3.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

If East had bid 1-Club, South 1-Spade, West 2-Diamonds, North 2-Hearts, East 3-Clubs, South 4-Hearts, East 5-Clubs, South 5-Hearts, and West doubled, how should East play to defeat the contract?

THEATERS

Heroic Story.

The stirring story of the man who made the phrase, "Custer's Last Stand," synonomous for courage in the face of all odds is told in "They Died With Their Boots On," Warner Bros., spectacular picture based on the life of Gen. George A. Custer. The role was tailor-made for Erol Flynn who plays Custer while a roster of other stellar stars appear in other roles of historical import. Olivia de Havilland plays Custer's wife, John Litel appears as General Phil Sheridan. Walter Hampden, Hattie McDaniel and Regis Toomey are others in the cast.

Stage Revue.

"All Star Revue," the Madison stage show, continues today on the same bill that has Lupe Velez and Leon Errol as the chief screen attractions in "The Mexican Spitfire's Baby." The revue presents a series of comedy acts, acrobatic performances and song and dance numbers by Nixon and Sands, the Three Sensational Ross Sisters, Raymond and Stone, Stables and Cerney and the Gasco family. The fire flies in "The Mexican Spitfire's Baby," when a war orphan turns out to be a glamorous damsel of 21 instead of a child in arms. Martin Martin plays the "baby," and Lupe Felez Velez and Dennis Lindsay, the foster parents.

Action Drama.

When a daughter of the confederacy casts her lot with a gang of desperadoes she wins a name known throughout the west in "Belle Starr," Technicolor drama, showing at the Ritz. Gene Tierney plays the title role and Randolph Scott is cast opposite her as "Sam Starr," the bandit chief. "Married Bachelor," with Robert Young and Ruth Hussey is the second attraction.

Army Comedy.

Fred Astaire joins the army to escape an avalanche of trouble in a theatrical producer's office but finds the "office" follows him right into camp in "You'll Never Get Rich," comedy musical, at the Park. Robert Benchley plays the producer who fancies himself a Canasova with such chorus pretties as Rita Hayworth. He relies on Astaire to extricate him from domestic difficulties as well as stage his shows. Astaire gets into trouble himself by impersonating an officer but winds up dancing with Miss Hayworth in the end. Frieda Inescort and Oso Massen are also cast. "Bachelor Daddy," with Baby Sandy and Donald Woods is the second feature.

Unique Comedy.

"Here Comes Mr. Jordan," Robert Montgomery's starring feature at the Mejestic, is reminiscent of the "Topper" films. Montgomery plays a prize fighter whose spirit returns to earth after an airplane crash that according to celestial records was a little premature. Claude Rains plays "Mr. Jordan," the heavenly train dispatcher.. "Western Union," with Robert Young, Randolph Scott and Dean Yeager is the second attraction.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, Jan. 2.

According to the lunar transits of this day all depends upon a sane, conservative and balanced state of mind and emotions, since there are very encouraging signs of fair opportunities for success, progress and moderately fulfilled objectives. There is also a tendency to reckless, tempestuous, ungoverned and violent behavior which may defeat the most glowing promises. Taking time to rationalize rather than flying into hasty predicaments may assure co-operation from those willing to assist. Safeguard the domestic circle from turbulence.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of fair prospects, which may measure up to cherished ambitions and heartfelt hopes, but this good fortune is likely to be jeopardized by any wayward, ill-controlled or foolhardy actions, which might bring defeat and humiliation. Overconfidence and audacity also menace. Shun strife in domestic or intimate associations.

A child born on this day, while having fair talents, ambitions and good intentions, may also have a turbulent, willful and passionate temperament likely to prove its undoing. It may be overbearing and exasperating.

Theory On Tooth Decay Disproved By Experiment

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—Research men in the University of California College of Dentistry reported experiments recently which indicate that there is no relationship between amount of minerals in the saliva and tooth decay.

Tooth decay is caused by an acid which is produced by a "bug" known as lactobacillus acidophilus. The acid literally eats holes in the enamel of the teeth and causes tooth decay.

Some dentists have suspected that saturation of the saliva with calcium and phosphorus neutralizes the acid and protects the teeth from decay. Persons with dental caries, it was believed, did not have a proper balance of calcium and phosphorus in their saliva.

Experimenters analyzed the saliva samples of 90 persons entirely free of dental caries, and 108 persons with active caries.

They found that there was no difference whatsoever in the rate of flow of calcium and phosphorus between the two groups.

WHEAT SUPPLY GIVES ALLIES EDGE ON AXIS

General Foods Expert Says Will Win Victory For Major Powers.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—The war is going to be won with the aid of wheat—and the democracies have it.

Surveying this situation today I can report two vital facts:

1. The world wheat supply is large.

2. And it's largely concentrated in the United States, Canada, Australia, and the Argentine.

In fact, the Axis powers and their conquered countries have suffered bitterly through the disruption of wheat production and distribution, as well as the destruction of food plants and equipment.

Strategists know how closely war and wheat are linked. They see how the non-Axis countries enjoy a big military advantage in these tiny grains of nourishment, which may prove explosively harmful to the aggressors.

World wheat production during 1941 was less than in the preceding year. It was well below the peak crop of 1938. Also, 1941 world consumption was less than in the two previous years

But America in 1942—civilians as well as fighting forces—should eat well. The United States will not have to join the ranks of European nations now on bread rations. We do not now foresee even the use of flour substitutes. Why? Because this nation has the largest wheat supply in our history. It is stored in grain elevators all over the country.

As for the harvest, our 1941 wheat crop was the second largest on record—exceeded only by that of 1915.

The Canadian wheat crop in 1941 was somewhat below the 1940 record production. But the carryover by our northern neighbor in 1941 is the largest on record.

Japanese wheat production of some 59,400,000 bushels is well below the 1940 record of 66,000,000 bushels, which was some 15,000,000 bushels above crops prior to 1937 in that country.

Italian wheat output in 1941 is about 200,000 bushels below the 1940 crop of 268,200,000—considerably lower than the 300,000,000 bushel record production in 1938.

German wheat production, if all of the conquered nations on the Continent are lumped together, probably is below that of 1940, but there are no accurate figures available. The 1940-1941 winter weather, however, caused crop damage.

Then, too, there were disruptions in the supply of farm labor, fertilizer, and draught power—a shortage of gasoline prevented farm machinery operation, and most horses were seized for military use.

Rains and war conditions hampered Continental winter wheat seeding in 1941.

Russia has been reported sowing the largest winter wheat acreage in its history. Most of this planting is in Siberia and the vast reaches of Kazakstan—the region which lies athwart the European and Asiatic connections of the Soviet from the Volga far to the east of the Urals. These fields, of increasing importance in recent years, are remote from the Ukraine.

The war and weather probably will settle the fate of the Ukraine wheat fields—the "bread basket" of Russia and the backbone of its agriculture.

QUERIED IN SLAYING

CINCINNATI —(AP)— A 52-year-old man was questioned today in the death of Mrs. Jean Smith, 45, whose battered body was found slumped in a chair at her home.

ONE WAR BEER—$125.

STROUD, Gloucestershire —(U.P.)— When Dr. G. Hoffman put up a glass of beer for auction to swell the war fund it was sold twice, not because of inefficiency nor because two bidders were parched. The total price was $125.

You cannot lose a cent on any investment you make in cattle raising if you go about it in the right way. First of all, begin with high quality feed. Insist on Hanco.

street, water and sewage, would be announced later. He indicated that no change would be made, however.

Another appointment expected to be made later was that of a new member of the planning commission. Vaughn has resigned that post as well as the other on the park commission. A successor will not be named until the park commission has elected a new chairman who is usually appointed to the planning board.

Republican members of city council are expected to select a new clerk of council at caucas meeting on Sunday at the municipal building. Previous attempts to select a clerk have been announced as being unsuccessful. Political observers believe however that Robert R. Black, jr., will be named to the post.

Richland county commissioners will elect a chairman and appoint the dog warden, relief office staff, and the courthouse custodian and janitors at their annual meeting Monday morning.

C. T. Mitchell, present chairman of the board, begins the final year of his second term today. The other two commissioners, Ray Hout and Guy Stewart, will continue in office through 1943.

Since no county official was elected in 1941, there will be no new office holders at the courthouse this year.

CITY WHOOPS IN NEW YEAR

crowded some sections of Mansfield's down town. There were only minor disorders. Police reported two arrests were made on intoxication charges.

The largest private celebration in the city was held by the Our Club, a local dancing club, that took over the ballroom and other facilities at the Mansfield-Leland hotel for the night.

Residential Mansfield kept its lights burning until dawn as informal gatherings ranging from small family parties to larger organizational affairs had the new year started well on its way.

Today will be quiet with most business suspended, city and county offices closed and no postal deliveries. For many of the city's industrial workers however New Year day will not be a holiday due to the necessity of maintaining defense production.

The Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company will work 100 per cent while the Ohio Brass company, Tappan Stove company and Mansfield Tire and Rubber company will be among the other industries maintaining a partial force on defense orders.

"Open House," is slated at the municipal building from 9 to 11 a. m. so that city office holders may greet their friends at an informal session and enjoy refreshments. Mansfield Masonic groups will also observe open house from 2 to 6 p. m. in the Masonic temple.

Congregations from three churches will sound a religious note in the day's events. St. Peter's Catholic church will follow the regular Sunday schedule for masses, the last a solemn high mass at 11 a. m. B'Nai Jacob congregation will hold services at 10 a. m. and Grace Episcopal church will conduct communion at 11 a. m.

KEGG HONORED AT LUNCHEON

Retiring Lumbermens Secretary Praised at Gathering of Company Associates.

Recognition of his 38 years of service with Lumbermens Mutual Insurance company was accorded W. H. G. Kegg at a luncheon given in his honor at the Mansfield-Leland hotel Wednesday, with officials of the company and office associates in attendance.

Following the luncheon Charles H. Keating, president of the company, gave a review of conditions that existed in 1903, when Kegg became associated with the then small company, and expressed the company's appreciation of the long and capable service of the retiring secretary.

E. S. Nail, founder of Lumbermens and chairman of the board of directors, briefly told of the early history of the company and of the beginning of Kegg's employment, not forgetting the national prominence gained by the combination of the names "Nail" and "Kegg" as they frequently appeared on hotel registers in various cities.

Gifts from the company and from associates were presented by Leonard Jones, with response by the recipient.

In the announcement two weeks ago of his intended retirement at the end of the year Kegg said that filling his leisure time would present no problem, that his real problem will be "to find time to do all the things I want to do."

New Natural Medicine "Bee Bee's" Gave Unbelievable Relief

New Medicine Known As "Bee Bee's" Gave Amazingly Quick Relief After Suffering Daily From Severe Cramps In Legs and Arms, Sore Stiff Hands and Feet.

"It is a real pleasure for me to say a good word for your wonderful Bee Bee's, because I've been troubled with my kidneys for a long time," said Mr. Charles Webster, 42 West High street, Piqua, Ohio, who is 73 years of age.

"Cramps would come in my legs four to six times at night then I would have to get up and put my weight on my feet and stir around to get the leaders in my legs straightened out before I could rest. In the daytime if I stood up and turned my foot quickly I would suffer with severe cramps in my foot for several hours. Also I was bothered with cramps in the calves of my legs that were so severe that I would have to cry. My hands would cramp so bad that when I was reading a newspaper I would have to lay down the paper. If I bent over and straightened up my back would be filled with sharp pains. After taking a few bottles of Bee Bee's I was relieved from the above ailments. I would recommend Bee Bee's as a truly wonderful medicine to anyone."
